Brains Exchanged.

Remarkable discoveries in surgery are often reported, but for a long time past nothing more interesting has been made public than the brain grafting experiments of Dr. W. G. Thompson, professor of physiology in the New York Medical College. Hitherto, skin, bone, teeth, muscle, nerves, glands, eyes and mucous membrane have all been grafted with more or less completeness, but successful brain grafting has not heretofore been performed. Professor Thompson experimented with two dogs and with a cat and a dog. In both instances he was successful in transplanting a portion of brain from one animal to the other, and in establishing a complete union, through organized connective tissue, of the contiguous portions of two brains. After 7 weeks, the cat's brain still maintained enough vitality to be distinctly recognized as brain tissue. Dr. Thompson concludes that the main fact of the experiment—that brain tissue has sufficient vitality to survive for seven weeks the operation of transplantation without wholly losing its identity as brain substance—suggests an interesting field for further research. While these experiments are interesting, the practical beneficial result is not yet apparent. It is pointed out by the Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases that they simply show that brain grafting can be accomplished as successfully as skin grafting. The process, of course, does not transfer the functions of the grafted portion of the brain to the other brain, nor does the grafted portion partake of the function of the brain into which it is grafted. Men who have little or no brains and plenty of money—the class commiserated by the Tichborne claimant in his diary, produced at the famous trial—will be disappointed to hear that the practical side of brain-grafting has yet to be demonstrated. However, as Dr. Thompson points out, the experiments are not yet ended. Under the new system it may yet be possible for a rich man to swap brain tissue with a poverty stricken but long headed fellow citizen, and thus get a new start in reasoning powers! But we doubt it.

To Honor the Prince.

NEWPORT, July 18.—Arrangements are under way for many entertainments of an elaborate character on the arrival of George, son of the Prince of Wales, who is expected July 31. Ward McAllister is arranging a subscription for the fete in honor of the prince and suite August 2nd at McAllister's summer house, with 250 invited guests, a picnic under McAllister's supervision August 5th, and social events of all sorts, naval manœuvres and torpedo experiments are also proposed.

HORRIBLE INTERMENTS.

AWFUL SCENE IN CHINA GRAPHICLY DESCRIBED.

Cleaning up the New York Fire Ruins—Brazil Does Honor to the United States Flag—New Telegraphic Regulation to Come in Force.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The Bulletin cables report rains in England and no improvement in the condition of the growing hop crops there or in Germany.

Prominent Women Dead.

BUFFALO, July 19.—Mrs. F. Fargo, wife of the late well known express manager, who was at one time prominent in California politics, died at the Mansion House to-day.

GENEVA, July 19.—Lydia Becker, a prominent leader of woman's suffrage, died to-day.

An Astronomer Dead.

CLINTON, N. Y., July 19.—Dr. Peters, the astronomer, was found dead in bed this morning.

The Western Union Fire.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The Western Union company has a large force of men at work clearing away the debris. Wire Chief Baldwin informed the press reporter that he would have a thousand wires running from the main building by Monday and business would be resumed in all directions.

Anderson Reprieved.

OLYMPIA, July 19.—A second reprieve has been granted to Richard Anderson, of Ellensburg, sentenced to be hanged for murder, until September 25, 1890. He will receive a hearing before the supreme court in the next session.

Monument for Fremont.

NEW YORK, July 19.—The Evening Telegram, in an editorial, says: There is eminent fitness in the project to make General Fremont's last resting place beneath a monument in Golden Gate park of San Francisco. He gained all his prominence in the great west, when it was a trackless, untrodden waste, and is more closely allied with its early days of progress than with any other state of the country. He always believed that himself, and regarded the presidency of California, as a successor of Sutter, one of the greatest honors of his life. California he looked upon as his native home. The members of his family, who have been consulted, agreed that Golden Gate Park should hold his remains, and their wishes will no doubt be complied with. It does not take a century to erect monuments on the Pacific coast.

Will Blaine Retire?

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The Blaine-Frye episode is much spoken of tonight. Senator Frye has never been in such relations with Secretary Blaine as to justify the addressing of a letter on a matter of important public policy to him before. True, he is chairman of the committee on commerce, but it is not in that capacity that Mr. Blaine appears to have addressed him. Senator Hale is regarded as the especial mouthpiece of the Secretary of State in the Senate, and for that reason the letter was sent openly through the press to Frye. The reply given out thereto attracts more comment, and adds a probability of a statement indicating Blaine's early retirement from the Cabinet.

Brazil Honors the American Flag.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The squadron of evolution arrived at Rio Janeiro June 29. As the squadron entered the bay it was saluted by Fort Santa Cruz, which hoisted the American flag and fired twenty-one guns an unusual compliment, as it was the visiting squadron's place to salute the fort first. Fort Santa Cruz displayed the United States ensign and dipped the Brazilian ensign in compliment to the passing squadron. The forts and men-of-war also fired salutes.

Postal Telegraphy.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Sawyer introduced in the Senate a bill prepared by the Postmaster-General to carry out his ideas for the establishment of limited postal and telegraph service. The bill authorizes the Postmaster-General to invite propositions for a ten years' contract for the transmission of postal telegrams at specified rates, which are for twenty words or less within a state or between stations at least 300 miles apart, 15 cents. The east and including Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, 25 cents. West of these states, 25 cents, etc. Telegrams to be transmitted in order of filing except that priority is to be given to government telegrams.

Broken Salmon Contracts.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—The Bristol bay company is plaintiff in an action against Louisa A. Rogers and Oscar G. Rogers, executors of the estate of W. H. Rogers, deceased, to recover $13,540, and for the cause of action sets forth that on the 11th of February, 1889, plaintiff entered into a contract to deliver to deceased 18,000 cases of Excelsior brand Alaska salmon at $1.27½ per dozen; that on the 16th of November, 1889, plaintiff tendered delivery of 1000 cases which deceased refused, and that on the 22nd of November he tendered 12,548 cases, which were refused, all of which was of the quality called for under the contract. Plaintiff sold the salmon at auction for $53,554, including expenses, while the purchase price amounted to $69,094, and the action is to recover the difference in these amounts.

BURIED ALIVE.

Many Lids of Coffins Were Pushed Down on Struggling Victims.

CHICAGO, July 19.—Edwin Reiham, an English resident of China now in this city, tells the following story of the Chinese expedition against Formosa. At the approach of the Chinese army the Formosan savages fled to the hills and that ended the campaign. General Chen Tai returned with a small body of selected troops by the steamer, leaving the rest to get back as best they could. Many marched overland and some were sent by freight boats with rations for one day. They were out eight days and some thirty or forty starved to death and twenty-five to thirty died of fever. They landed at the harbor of Auping where most horrible scenes were enacted. The dying men were strewn about the decks. The consul sent an appeal to Chen Tai who responded by sending grave diggers. These added to the horror of the situation.

According to an old custom, when a soldier dies his officer draws the burial expenses from the government, part of which goes to the dead man's comrades. This burial money was an incentive to the most horrible deeds of the grave-diggers. All sick, supposed to be dying, were hustled into coffins before their bodies were cold. It is said that soldiers were seen forcing the lids of the coffins down on feeble victims who were piteously crying for water. The coffin lids were nailed fast and the living men hurried away to burial.

COULDN'T ABUSE HIS PAPER.

A Reporter Calls a Candidate an Infernal Liar and Causes a Sensation.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 19.—At the political meeting at Marion yesterday, the farmers' candidate for governor was told by a reporter that he was an "infernal liar." Capt. Tillman, at every meeting abuses the Charleston News and Courier, and yesterday, after attacking the paper for some time he asked the audience to compare the News and Courier's reports with the actual proceedings as they observed them, and notice the misrepresentation by the newspapers. Shirley C. Hughson, cousin of General R. E. Lee, correspondent of the News and Courier, sprang to his feet, exclaiming: "Captain Tillman, if you mean to say that I've ever misrepresented you, you are an infernal liar, and the truth is not in you." The two men stood glaring at each other, and the audience began to sway with excitement. A chorus of voices shouted "Put him off the stand," and there was a rush for the platform. Gen. Berham and other friends of Hughson who were on the platform advanced and placed themselves at his side, while a score or more of anti-Tillman men crowded on the stage with open knives, pistols and other weapons. Three or four policemen with drawn clubs, grasped the railing of the platform and started towards Hughson, who stood with one hand on his hip pocket and defied them to touch him. He was surrounded by friends, and the policemen were forced back to the ground and a conflict was averted. Tillman left the meeting soon after without replying to Hughson's charge. He expressed the opinion straight out that the Democrats would have him assassinated before the end of the campaign.

LIFE PROLONGED.

The Study of the Art of Living to a Great Age—Experiments Tried.

The enchanters of China promised the Emperors of that country to find an elixir of long life that should efface the irreparable inroad of years. The astrologers and necromancers of the middle ages flattered themselves to have discovered the fountain of youth, in which a person had merely to bathe in order to recover his youth. All such dreams were long ago dispelled by the progress of science. Yet, in the heart of most men, there is such a desire to prolong their stay upon the earth that the art of living for a long time has not ceased to impassion a large number of persons who would be willing to endure all the evils of an indefinitely prolonged old age. We have several times had proof of this mania, which Dean Swift has so wittily stigmatized in his second voyage of Gulliver by showing in what a state of abject dejection the immortals of Laputa lived—those unfortunates who were condemned to survive their own selves through the loss of memory of what they had been. One of the perpetual secretaries of the Academy of Sciences has written a volume to prove that man should consider himself young up to 80 years of age. A noble Venetian named Cornaro lived twenty years in a scale pan in order to ascertain what aliment-ary regimen was best adapted to him. We have known old men who having learned that Mr. Chevreul had never drank anything but water, took the resolution to abstain wholly from wine, hoping in this way to exceed 100 years. Fortunately a rag gatherer, who reached the same age as the celebrated academician, spared them this sacrifice by informing his confrere in longevity that he had never drank anything but wine. But of all these whimsical tentatives, there doubtless is none more worthy of exciting our risibilities than the one to which the Society of Hygiene of Vienna is now devoting itself. In fact the association has just started an extensive investigation, in order to determine what it is necessary to do in order scientifically to prolong life beyond the ordinary limits, and to rival the patriarchs of the Scriptures as compared with whom Mr. Chevreul himself was but a child. The Society of Hygiene has, therefor drawn up a circular which it has sent to all the old men of Germany and Austria-Hungary occupying a certain position in the world, and which contains a multitude of questions about their regimen, their habits, the duration of their intellectual work, the nature of their recreation, their manner of clothing themselves, etc. The good Viennese hope in this way to get up a practical manual designed for those who wish some day to double the formidable cape of 80 years.

The military commission of the Austrian army have established a law that the offence of intoxication is to be punished the first time by a public reprimand, and the second offence by several days' imprisonment in the guard-house. The third offence is evidence that the victim is suffering from a chronic disease and he is placed under constant surveillance. His pay is taken out of his hands and every means used to prevent him from getting money to secure spirits.—Scientific American.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

A PRIEST COMMITS THE CRIME OF MURDER.

A Crowd of Women Route the Police of Buda Pesth—The Money Market of Buenos Ayres—Trouble Over the Cod Fishery in Newfoundland.

MONTREAL, July 19.—The Canadian Pacific earnings for the second week of July were $298,000, an increase in 1889 of $30,000.

A Priest's Crime.

LONDON, July 18.—The French detectives are watching every movement of Abbe Courtail, at Roudez, who shot Mme. Calinet dead in the street with a gun cane. The priest passionately protests his innocence, and declares that he simply intended to tap the young woman on the shoulder. People generally believe that his love for the victim, continued after her marriage, was the motive for the crime. The prisoner forgot one important thing when he accounted for the discharge of the gun cane, the ferrule which served to close the end of the weapon. The doctor who made the autopsy on the body of Mme. Calinet cannot find any trace of the ferrule, which must inevitably have penetrated had it been in its proper place. But the ferrule was off when the priest raised it. Who took it off, and for what purpose? No trace of the ferrule can be discovered at the place where the shooting occurred. The abbe has been interviewed at length in prison and he sticks to his original story that he knew the gun was loaded but did not suspect that it was cocked. One of his friends must have cocked it. The examining magistrate warned the priest that his defence was improbable, and that until more evidence in his favor was produced the authorities must look upon him as the murderer. At this the priest burst into tears and sobs. So nervous is the slayer of Mme. Calinet now that the governor of the prison has removed from his room everything that he might use to commit suicide, even his waist cord and his priestly cap. Careful examination will be made to-morrow of the priest's apartments, which were sealed up on Saturday last. The police have an idea that they will find important letters bearing on the motive for the crime, as the prisoner, when arrested, begged strongly to be allowed to go home and put his papers in order. This promises to furnish an extraordinary murder trial. There are few people who regard the prisoner as an innocent man. The public has no doubt of his guilt. It is known that he was an intimate associate of the woman he killed, but when she was married recently she resolutely turned her back upon him. The abbe has a poor reputation, and his bishop had so little confidence in him that for years he has had no clerical post of duty.

Women Rout the Police.

BUDA-PESTH, July 17.—Though it contained tragic elements, the town is laughing to-day at a singular riot, the result of a free exhibition of the trosseau of the Princess Thurn and Taxis. Six hundred women demanded admittance in a body and when the officers declined the entire force of females attacked the police and ushers, routing the force. Mounted police were called, and their clattering down the streets struck terror to the women, who made another rush for the doors, trampling to death in their haste two women and seven children.

French Seize English Schooner.

HALIFAX, July 17.—A dispatch from St. Pierre Miquelon says: The Newfoundland schooner Mary was seized by the French yesterday for selling cod roe.

Gold at Buenos Ayres.

BUENOS AYRES, July 17.—The premium on gold to-day is 197 per cent.

The president has sent a message to the house of deputies asking it to authorize an issue of $8,000,000 in small paper currency. This move alarmed the money market, and gold rose to 201 premium.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

W. S. Caine to Run as a Liberal—The Duke of Clarence Ill.

LONDON, July 19.—King Oscar of Sweden has signified his intention of attending the annual German naval manœuvres at Kiel, to which he is understood to have been invited by the Emperor.

AS A LIBERAL.

William S. Caine, unionist member of parliament, who was recently defeated for re-election at Burrow-in-furness, has given notice that he will contest the seat for East Bradford as a Liberal.

THE DUKE OF CLARENCE'S HEALTH.

The Duke of Clarence, the oldest son of the Prince of Wales, is in poor health, and is frequently compelled to remain in bed for several days.

It is asserted that he is suffering from the effects of his trip to India, whose climate disagreed with him during the whole of his visit to that country. His physicians are reticent concerning his condition, but it is well known he has been extremely delicate since his return, and he will probably go to the continent shortly.

The Post says it has reason to believe the present session of Parliament will come to an end on August 9th.

GERMANY IN AFRICA.

Baron Von Gravenuth, acting German Imperial Commissioner in Africa, has been interviewed at considerable length on the future of Germany in Africa, and the effect of the British protectorate over Zanzibar. He thinks that Tanza and Lindi would make excellent harbors, and could be so converted at a comparatively small outlay. It would be very difficult however, he believed in the transfer of the commercial centre of South Africa from Zanzibar to any other town, and in this fact is his chief objection to English exclusive control of Zanzibar. From the tone of his remarks, however, it is reasonable to infer that an attempt will be made to divert the commerce of Zanzibar in the near future.

MIDDLETON EULOGIZED.

The Chronicle this morning prints a leading article highly eulogistic of General Middleton, the unfortunately involved Commander of the Canadian militia. His services, the Chronicle asserts, have been brilliant and of a character that should commend him to the good will of every patriotic citizen of the Dominion.

CANADIAN NEWS.

Items of Interest Received by Telegraph from Different Points.

At a meeting of the Toronto financial sub-committee executive it was decided to place $700,000 fourteen years' debentures, for permanent improvements, at 3½ per cent. on the London market, at a minimum of 102½. One million dollars' worth of improvement short date consolidated debentures will also be placed at 4 per cent. bearing a minimum of .97.

Four of the Montreal Herald strikers have been committed for trial on the charge of conspiracy, and the Herald has instituted action for damages against the accused printers and other concerned in the efforts to entice away its employes.

TORONTO, July 14.—Speaking at the Orange celebration on the Exhibition Grounds, Saturday, Goldwin Smith said that, although he was not an Orangeman, he had read history and knew what they had done in the past. He thought that Orangemen have still a work to do on this continent. Happily the contest this time would not be with bullets, but Orangemen would again have to prove their cause. They did not wish to deprive the Roman Catholic citizens of any rights, neither did they wish to lose any of theirs. They did not want to be ruled by the priesthood of any church.

Turkish Censorship of the Press.

The Independent tells this story to illustrate the capricious severity of censorship to which the press of Turkey is subject:

"There is a Greek benevolent society in Constantinople which recently had occasion to publish a pamphlet on its work, and on the title page there was put a quotation from Paul's epistle to the Galatians. Very soon after it appeared a police officer came to the printing office and demanded of the editor that he should give him information as to who this Paul was who had been writing letters to the people of Galata (one of the suburbs of Constantinople), as he had orders to get a copy of these letters and to bring the aforesaid Paul to headquarters. The editor said that Paul could not be brought to headquarters; he was dead. But the functionary reported that his orders were to bring Paul, and if he could not bring Paul to bring the editor. It was of no use to protest that Paul had been in Heaven for eighteen hundred years; and the editor was taken to headquarters and put in prison for several days, until finally the Greek Patriarch interfered and presented the bureau of censorship with a copy of the letter of Paul, which he showed was addressed not to the people of Galata, but to a province of the ancient Roman Empire. This having at last been made clear, the editor was released."

A Little White Hearse.

The funeral procession comes slowly along the street. Drawn by two milk white ponies, the little white hearse with its nodding white plumes moves on. Upon its snow, silken curtains, buried beneath great masses of lilies and pale rose buds, rests a tiny white coffin. All is white—as purely white as the little soul that has flitted away from the waxen baby form lying within the coffin.

At the street corner stands a crowd of noisy boys, tossing a ball back and forth between them. The crush of the passing wheels falls upon their ears, and looking up, the ball is dropped, the loud shouts hushed, as each boy doffs his cap and stands in mute reverence while the little white hearse passes by.

A street car comes rumbling along the track, the bell upon the horse's neck jangling and clanging upon the air. The driver sees before him the little hearse with its flower-strewn burden and feels his strong heart throb beneath his rough jacket. The brakes are down, the bell hangs silent upon the horse's neck, while the driver with bowed head thinks of his baby boy, whose ruddy lips he kissed to-day at parting, and thanks God that no flower-decked coffin lid hides away his laughing face. The passengers look out and the women whisper with a sigh: "Some mother's eyes have looked their last upon her baby."

Amid the grime and dust of the street, a long row of laborers delve with bent forms in the earth beneath. The roll of wheels is heard, the weary bodies are lifted in vague curiosity, and each toil hardened face softens as the little white hearse goes by on its way to the grave.

So on by merry girls, who check their gay laughter; by stern-browed men, who forget for the moment the mighty problem of money and trade, and ambition, and give a fleeting thought to that world where the baby has gone, and where this remorseless struggle for wealth and fame and power will count for naught; on, on, through the ranks of the weary and the toil-laden, who gaze and sigh for the rest the baby has found, and the little white hearse goes teaching its lessons of love, of pity and of rest.—Detroit Free Press.

RECOGNITION IN HEAVEN

DR. TALMAGE SAYS IT IS AS SURE AS HEAVEN ITSELF.

A Magnificent Sermon Delivered in the Open Air at Waseca, Minn.—His Idea of the World to Come—A Great Home Circle.

WASECA, Minn., July 13.—The Rev. Dr. Talmage, who lectured here yesterday, preached to an enormous out door gathering here today. His subject was, "Meeting Our Friends in Heaven." The eminent clergyman took for his text II Samuel xii, 23: "I shall go to him." His sermon was as follows:

There is a very sick child in the abode of David the king. Disease, which stalks up the dark lane of the poor and puts its smothering hand on lip and nostril of the wan and wasted, also mounts the palace stairs, and bending over the pillow blows into the face of a young prince the frosts of pain and death. Tears are wine to the King of Terrors. Alas! for David the king. He can neither sleep nor eat, and lies prostrate on his face, weeping and wailing until the palace rings with the outcry of woe.

What are courtly attendants or victorious armies or conquered provinces under such circumstances? What, to any parent, is all splendid surrounding when his child is sick? Seven days have passed on. There in that great house two eyelids are gently closed, two little hands folded, two little feet quiet, one heart still. The servants come to bear the tidings to the king, but they cannot make up their minds to tell him, and they stand at the door whispering about the matter, and David hears them and he looks up and says to them, "Is the child dead?" "Yes; he is dead." David rouses himself up, washes himself, puts on new apparel, and sits down to food. What power hushed that tempest? What strength was it that lifted up that king whom grief had dethroned? Oh, it was the thought that he would come again into the possession of that darling child. No gravedigger's spade could hide him. The wintry blasts of death could not put out the bright light. There would be a forge somewhere that with silver hammer would weld the broken links. In a city where the hoofs of the pale horse never strike the pavement he would clasp his lost treasure. He wipes away the tears from his eyes, and he clears the choking grief from his throat and exclaims: "I shall go to him."

SHALL WE MEET AGAIN?

Was David right or wrong? If we part on earth will we meet again in the next world? "Well," says some one; "that seems to be an impossibility. Heaven is so large a place we never could find our kindred there." Going into some city, without having appointed a time and place for meeting, you might wander around for weeks and for months, and perhaps for years, and never see each other; and heaven is vaster than all earthly cities together, and how are you going to find your departed friend in that country? It is so vast a realm. John went up on one mountain of inspiration, and he looked off upon the multitude, and he said: "Thousands of thousands." Then he came upon a greater altitude of inspiration and looked off upon it again and he said: "Ten thousand times ten thousand." And then he came on a higher mount of inspiration, and looked off again and he said: "A hundred and forty and four thousand and thousands of thousands." And he came on a still greater height of inspiration, and he looked off again and exclaimed: "A great multitude that no man can number."

Now I ask, how are you going to find your friends in such a throng as that? Is not this idea we have been entertaining after all a falsity? Is this doctrine of future recognition of friends in heaven a guess, a myth, a whim, or is it a granitic foundation upon which the soul pierced of all ages may build a glorious hope? Intense question. Every heart in this audience throbs right into it. There is in every soul here the tomb of at least one dead. Tremendous question. It makes the lip quiver, and the cheek flush, and the entire nature thrill. Shall we know each other there? I get letters almost every month asking me to discuss this subject. I get a letter in a bold, scholarly hand, on gilt edged paper, asking me to discuss this question, and I say, "Ah, that is a curious man, and he wants a curious question solved." But I get another letter. It is written with a trembling hand, and on what seems to be a torn out leaf of a book, and here and there is the mark of a tear, and I say: "Oh, that is a broken heart, and it wants to be comforted."

POSITIVE CERTAINTY.

The object of this sermon is to take this theory out of the region of surmise and speculation into the region of positive certainty. People say: "It would be very pleasant if that doctrine were true. I hope it may be true. Perhaps it is true. I wish it were true." But I believe that I can bring an accumulation of argument to bear upon this matter which will prove the doctrine of future recognition as plainly as that there is any heaven at all, and that the kiss of reunion at the celestial gate will be as certain as the dying kiss at the door of the sepulcher.

Now, when you are going to build a ship you must get the right kind of timber. You lay the keel and make the framework of the very best materials, the keelson, stanchions, plank shear, counter timber-knee, transoms all of solid oak. You may build a ship of lighter material, but when the cyclone comes on it will go down. Now we may have a great many beautiful theories about the future world, built out of our own fancy, and they may do very well as long as we have smooth sailing in the world, but when the storms of sorrow come upon us, and the hurricane of death, we will be swamped—we will be foundered. We want a theory built out of the solid oak of God's eternal Word. The doctrine of future recognition is not so often positively stated in the Word of God as implied, and you know, my friends, that that is, after all, the strongest mode of affirmation. Your friend travels in foreign lands. He comes home. He does not begin by arguing with you to prove that there are such places as London and Stockholm and Paris and Dresden and Berlin, but his conversation implies it. And so this Bible does not so positively state this theory as, all up and down, its chapters take it for granted.

"I SHALL GO TO HIM."

What does my text imply? "I shall go to him." What consolation would it be to David to go to his child if he would not know him? Would David have been allowed to record this anticipation for the inspection of all ages if it were a groundless anticipation? We read in the first book of the Bible, Abraham died and was gathered to his people. Jacob died and was gathered to his people. Moses died and was gathered to his people. What people? Why, their friends, their comrades, their old companions. Of course it means that. It cannot mean anything else. So in the very beginning of the Bible four times that is taken for granted. The whole New Testament is an arbor, over which this doctrine creeps like a luxuriant vine full of the purple clusters of consolation. James, John and Peter followed Christ into the mountain. A light falls from heaven on that mountain and lifts it into the glories of the celestial. Christ's garments glow and his face shines like the sun. The door of heaven swings open. Two spirits come down and alight on that mountain. The disciples look at them and recognize them as Moses and Elias. Now, if those disciples standing on the earth could recognize these two spirits who had been for years in heaven, do you tell me that we, with our heavenly eyesight, will not be able to recognize those who have gone out from among us only five, ten, twenty, thirty years ago?

The Bible indicates over and over again that the angels know each other, and then the Bible says that we are to be higher than the angels; and if the angels have the power of recognition shall not we, who are to be higher than they in the next realm, have as good eyesight and as good capacity? What did Christ mean in his conversation with Mary and Martha when he said, "Thy brother shall rise again?" It was as much as to say, "Don't cry. Don't wear yourselves out with this trouble. You will see him again. Thy brother shall rise again."

A GREAT HOME CIRCLE.

The Bible describes heaven as a great home circle. Well, now, that would be a very queer home circle where the members did not know each other. The Bible describes death as a sleep. If we know each other before we go to sleep shall we not know each other after we wake up? Oh, yes. We will know each other a great deal better then than now; "for now," says the apostle, "we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." It will be my purified, enthroned and glorified body gazing on your purified, enthroned and glorified body.

Now I demand, if you believe the Bible, that you take this theory of future recognition out of the realm of speculation and surmise into the region of positive certainty, and no more keep saying: "I hope it is so, I have an idea it is so, I guess it is so." Be able to say, with all the concentrated energy of body, mind and soul, "I know it is so."

There are in addition to these Bible arguments other reasons why I accept this theory. In the first place because the rejection of it implies the entire obliteration of our memory. Can it be possible that we shall forget forever those with whose walk, look, manner we have been so long familiar? Will death come, and with a sharp, keen blade hew away this faculty of memory? Abraham said to Dives, "Son, remember." If the exiled and the lost remember will not the enthroned remember?

VICTOR BESIDE VICTOR.

You know very well that our joy in any circumstance is augmented by the companionship of our friends. We cannot see a picture with less than four eyes or hear a song with less than four ears. We want some one beside us with whom to exchange glances and sympathies, and I suppose the joy of heaven is to be augmented by the fact that we are to have our friends with us when there rise before us the thrones of the blessed, and when there surges up in our ears the jubilate of the saved. Heaven is not a contraction; it is an expansion. If I know you here I will know you better there. Here I see you with only two eyes, but there the soul shall have a million eyes. It will be immortality gazing on immortality, ransomed spirit in colloquy with ransomed spirit, victor beside victor. When John Evans, the Scotch minister, was seated in his study his wife came in and said to him, "My dear, do you think we will know each other in heaven?" He turned to her and said, "My dear, do you think we will be bigger fools in heaven than we are here?"

Again I accept this doctrine of future recognition because the world's expectancy affirms it. In all lands and ages this theory is received. What form of religion planted it? No form of religion, for it is received under all forms of religion. Then, I argue, a sentiment, a feeling, an anticipation, universally planted, must have been God implanted, and if God implanted it is rightfully implanted. Socrates writes: "Who would not part with a great deal to purchase a meeting with Orpheus and Homer? If it be true that this is to be the consequence of death I could even be able to die often."

Among the Danes, when a master dies his servant sometimes slays himself that he may serve the master in the future world. Cicero, living before Christ's coming, said: "Oh, glorious day when I shall retire from this low and sordid scene to associate with the divine assemblage of departed spirits, and not only with the ones I have just now mentioned, but with my dear Cato, the best of sons and most faithful of men. If I seemed to bear his death with fortitude it was by no means that I did not most sensibly feel the loss I had sustained. It was because I was supported by the consoling reflection that we could not long be separated."

ALL BELIEVE IT.

The Norwegian believes it. The Indian believes it. The Greenlander believes it. The Swiss believes it. The Turk believes it. Under every sky, by every river, in every zone, the theory is adopted, and so I say a principle universally implanted must be God implanted, and hence a right belief. The argument is irresistible.

Again I adopt this theory because there are features of moral temperament and features of the soul that will distinguish us forever. How do we know each other in this world? Is it merely by the color of the eye, or the length of the hair, or the facial proportions? Oh, no. It is by the disposition as well, by natural affinity, using the word in the very best sense and not in the bad sense; and if in the dust our body should perish and lie there forever, and there should be no resurrection, still the soul has enough features and the disposition has enough features to make us distinguishable. I can understand how in sickness a man will become so delirious that he will not know his own friends; but will we be blasted with such insufferable idiocy that, standing beside our best friends for all eternity, we will never guess who they are?

Again I think that one reason why we ought to accept this doctrine is because we never in this world have an opportunity to give thanks to those to whom we are spiritually indebted. The joy of heaven, we are told, is to be inaugurated by a review of life's work. These Christian men and women who have been toiling for Christ, have they seen the full result of their work? Oh, no.

In the church at Somerville, N. J., John Vredenburgh preached for a great many years. He felt that his ministry was a failure, although he was a faithful minister, preaching the gospel all the time. He died, and died amid discouragements, and went home to God, for no one overlooked that John Vredenburgh was a good Christian minister. A little while after his death there came a great awakening in Somerville, and one Sabbath two hundred souls stood up in the Christian altar espousing the cause of Christ, among them my own father and mother. And what was peculiar in regard to nearly all of those two hundred souls was that they dated their religious impressions from the ministry of John Vredenburgh. Will that good Christian man before the throne of God never meet those souls brought to Christ through his instrumentality? Oh, of course he will know them. I remember one Sabbath afternoon, borne down with the sense of my sins and knowing not God, I took up Doddridge's "Rise and Progress." Oh, what a dark afternoon it was, and I read the chapters, and I read the prayers, and I tried to make the prayers my own. Oh, I must see Philip Doddridge. A glorious old book he wrote. It is out of fashion now.

THEY WILL KNOW THEM.

There is a mother before the throne of God. You say her joy is full. Is it? You say there can be no augmentation of it. Cannot there be? Her son was a wanderer and a vagabond on the earth when that good mother died. He broke her old heart. She died leaving him in the wilderness of sin. She is before the throne of God now. Years pass and that son repents of his crimes and gives his heart to God and becomes a useful Christian, and dies and enters the gates of heaven. You tell me that that mother's joy cannot be augmented? Let them confront each other. The son and the mother. "Oh," she says to the angels of God, "rejoice with me. The dead is alive again, and the lost is found. Hallelujah! I never expected to see this lost one come back." The Bible says nations are to be born in a day. When China comes to God will it not know Dr. Abeel? When India comes will it not know Dr. John Scudder? When the Indians come to God will they not know David Brainard?

I see a soul entering heaven at last, with covered face at the idea that it has done so little for Christ and feeling borne down with unworthiness, and it says to itself, "I have no right to be here." A voice from the throne says, "Oh, you forget that Sunday school class you invited to Christ. I was one of them." And another voice says, "You forget that poor man to whom you gave a loaf of bread and told of the heavenly bread. I was that man." And another says, "You forget that sick one to whom you gave medicine for the body and the soul. I was that one." And then Christ, from a throne overtopping all the rest, will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these, you did it to me." And then the seraphs will take their harps from the side of the throne and cry, "What song shall it be?" And Christ, bending over the harpers, shall say, "It shall be the 'Harvest Home.'"

One more reason why I am disposed to accept this doctrine of future recognition is that so many in their last hour on earth have confirmed this theory. I speak not of persons who have been delirious in their last moment and knew not what they were about, but of persons who died in calmness and placidity and who were not naturally superstitious. Often the glories of heaven have struck the dying pillow, and the departing man has said he saw and heard those who had gone away from him. How often it is in the dying moments parents see their departed children and children see their departed parents. I came down to the banks of the Mohawk river. It was evening and I wanted to go over the river, and so I waved my hat and shouted, and after awhile I saw someone waving on the opposite bank and I heard him shout, and the boat came across and I got in and was transported. And so I suppose it will be in the evening of our life. We will come down to the river of death and give a signal to our friends on the other shore and they will give a signal back to us, and the boat comes and our departed kindred are the oarsmen, the fires of the setting day tingeing the tops of the paddles.

WHEN THE LAST HOUR COMES.

Oh, have you never sat by such a deathbed? In that hour you hear the departing soul cry, "Hark! Look!" You harkened and you looked. A little child pining away because of the death of its mother, getting weaker and weaker every day, was taken into the room where hung the picture of her mother. She seemed to enjoy looking at it, and then she was taken away and after awhile died. In the last moment that wan and wasted little one lifted her hands, while her face lighted up with the glory of the next world, and cried out, "Mother!" You tell me she did not see her mother? She did. So in my first settlement at Belleville a plain man said to me: "What do you think I heard last night? I was in the room where one of my neighbors was dying. He was a good man, and he said he heard the angels of God singing before the throne. I haven't much poetry about me, but I listened and I heard them, too." Said I, "I have no doubt of it." Why, we are to be taken up to heaven at last by ministering spirits. Who are they to be? Souls that went up from Madras, or Antioch, or Jerusalem? Oh, no; our glorified kindred are going to troop around us.

Heaven is not a stately, formal place, as I sometimes hear it described, a very frigidity of splendor, where people stand on cold formalities and go around about with heavy crowns of gold on their heads. No, that is not my idea of heaven. My idea of heaven is more like this: You are seated in the eveningtide by the fireplace, your whole family there, or nearly all of them there. While you are seated talking and enjoying the evening hour there is a knock at the door and the door opens, and there comes in a brother that has been long absent. He has been absent, for years you have not seen him, and no sooner do you make up your mind that it is certainly he than you leap up, and the question is who shall give him the first embrace. That is my idea of heaven—a great home circle where they are waiting for us.

Oh, will you not know your mother's voice there? She who always called you by your first name long after others had given you the formal "Mister?" You were never anything but James, or John, or George, or Thomas, or Mary or Florence to her. Will you not know your child's voice? She of the bright eye, and the ruddy cheek and the quiet step, who came in from play and flung herself into your lap a very shower of mirth and beauty? Why, the picture is graven in your soul. It cannot wear out. If that little one should stand on the other side of some heavenly hill and call to you, you would hear her voice above the burst of heaven's great orchestra. Know it! You could not help but know it.

A GLORIOUS CONSOLATION.

Now I bring you this glorious consolation of future recognition. If you could get this theory into your heart it would lift a great many shadows that are stretching across it. When I was a lad I used to go out to the railroad track and put my ear down on the track, and I could hear the express train rumbling miles away and coming on; and today, my friends, if we only had faith enough we could put our ear down to the grave of our dead, and listen and hear in the distance the rumbling on of the chariots of resurrection victory. O heaven, sweet heaven! You do not spell heaven as you used to spell it. You used to spell it h-e-a-v-e-n—heaven. But now when you want to spell that word you place side by side the faces of the loved ones who are gone, and in that irradiation of light and love and beauty and joy you spell it out as never before in songs and hallelujahs. Oh, ye whose hearts are down under the sod of the cemetery, cheer up at the thought of this reunion. Oh, how much you will have to tell them when once you meet them!

How much you have been through since you saw them last. On the shining shore you will talk it all over. The heartaches, the loneliness, the sleepless nights, the weeping until you had no more power to weep, because the heart was withered and dried up. Story of vacant chair, and empty cradle, and little shoe only half worn out, never to be worn again, just the shape of the foot that once pressed it. And dreams when you thought that the departed had come back again, and the room seemed bright with their faces, and you started up to greet them, and in the effort the dream broke and you found yourself standing amid room in the midnight—alone. Talking it all over, and then hand in hand walking up and down in the light. No sorrow, no tears, no death. O, heaven, beautiful heaven! Heaven where our friends are. Heaven where we expect to be. In the east they take a cage of birds and bring it to the tomb of the dead, and then they open the door of the cage and the birds, flying out, sing. And I would today bring a cage of Christian consolations to the grave of your loved ones, and I would open the door and let them fill all the air with the music of their voices.

AROUND THE THRONE OF GOD.

Oh, how they bound in, these spirits before the throne! Some shout with gladness, some break forth into uncontrollable weeping for joy, some stand speechless in their shock of delight. They sing, they quiver with excessive gladness, they gaze on the temples, on the palaces, on the waters, on each other. They weave their joy into garlands, they spring it into triumphal arches, they strike it on timbrels, and then all the loved ones gather in a great circle around the throne of God—fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, sons and daughters, lovers and friends, hand to hand around about the throne of God—the circle ever widening—hand to hand, joy to joy, jubilee to jubilee, victory to victory, "until the day break and the shadows flee away. Turn thou, my beloved, and be like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether."

Oh, how different it is on earth from the way it is in heaven when a Christian dies! We say, "Close his eyes." In heaven they say, "Give him a palm." On earth we say, "Let him down in the ground." In heaven they say, "Raise him on a throne." On earth it is, "Farewell, farewell." In heaven it is, "Welcome, welcome." And so I see a Christian soul coming down to the river of death, and he steps into the river and the water comes to the ankle. He says, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not death." And he wades still deeper down into the waters until the flood comes to the knee, and he says, "Lord Jesus, tell me, tell me, is this death?" And Christ says, "No, no, this is not death." And he wades still farther down until the wave comes to the girdle, and the soul says, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not." And deeper in wades the soul till the billow strikes the lip, and the departing one cries, "Lord Jesus, is this death?" "No," says Christ, "this is not." But when Christ had lifted that soul on a throne of glory, and the pomp and joy of heaven came surging to its feet, then Christ said, "This, oh transported soul, this is death."

MR. MERCIER'S DEMANDS.

Compared with our own Premier, whose "gingerly" treatment of an important public question is now a matter of history, Premier MERCIER is a most blunt, outspoken man. We have reference to the latter's speech at the Montreal banquet, where without beating about the bush, or pretending that the success of his impending demand depended upon profound secrecy, he, in effect, made an out-and-out demand for a revision of the terms of confederation in several important particulars. The demand amounted substantially to this: An enlargement of the powers of the provinces; their complete autonomy in all matters of local concern; the abolition of the veto power held by the Dominion Government, and such a reconstruction of the financial basis of the union as will materially increase Provincial revenues. This is the character of his demand as reproduced by the Week, and that paper follows it up with the comment, that, there is something rather cool in the way in which the Premier puts the case, declares, in effect, that Quebec's "allowance" is too small." As to whether Quebec's allowance is too small, that is a matter yet to be settled upon, but with respect to the enlargement of Provincial powers, Mr. MERCIER is doubtless nine-tenths right. This Province has reason to complain of its restricted legislative powers. We really haven't the latitude of a municipality. Our fisheries grievance is chronic; all vital legislation, in fact, is in the hands of the Dominion House. Remote, isolated, we are handicapped by the possible prejudices of the east, that is to say, we cannot expect the east to enter into the spirit of all or any movements which we may deem vitally essential to the full development of our resources. In a word we are not self-governing; we are governed by the east.

We affect to deprecate the American system of government, but we are, almost without knowing it, being driven to the adoption of that system. Day by day it is becoming more apparent that the Provinces, standing in relation to the Dominion as a whole, as do the States to the United States, the circumstances of Provincial development require that as in the case of each State our legislative powers should be in their scope as broad and as comprehensive. The cohesiveness of the States is all owing to the great latitude of the respective state governments; our querulousness and our talk of disunion is attributable to the circumscribed scope of Provincial governments. Barring all matters in which the Dominion is interested, we should have full swing. But to refer to Mr. MERCIER's programme, seeing that Quebec is $20,000,000 in debt, it is questionable whether the Dominion should assume the debt that Quebec may start anew with a "clean sheet." If Quebec wants a separate autonomy let her have it but with her debts and all. If Quebec feels that she is able to shift for herself politically, let her also shift for herself financially, and especially since none but her derived any benefit from the debts incurred. Each State in the American Union must foot its own bills; that is the price of its political independence. Let then, Quebec, if she would paddle her own canoe, foot her own bills. But the Week is of the opinion that Canada cannot afford to let one of her chief Provinces become bankrupt. We think she can. But there is no danger of Quebec becoming bankrupt. Quebec cannot afford it herself. So long as Quebec has a solitary asset she is bound to offer it as security for what she owes. Twenty million is a good deal of money, but Quebec ought to be worth it. If the Dominion undertakes to assume Quebec's debts there are other Provinces which will clamor to have their burdens eased the same way. Let every tub stand on its own bottom. Let Mr. MERCIER be told with a frankness only equalled by his own bluntness that under no circumstances will the Dominion undertake to assume any of Quebec's liabilities.

DICTIONARIES.

The dictionary bonus offered by certain newspaper publishers on this coast as a means of extending the circulation of their journals is becoming contagious. The Regina Leader is out with an offer in kind, and heaven knows that the tender is low enough even for an alleged re-print of the dictionary of 1845. But the question that naturally associates itself with this lexicographical bonus is, that if a weekly newspaper together with a dictionary may be had for $4,50 is not the price asked for the later editions of Webster altogether too high. If an 1845 edition of Webster only costs about $3.50, which is allowing $1 for the newspaper, has not somebody a bonanza in dictionaries for which $15 is charged. It will strike the ordinary citizen, that if the 1845 edition may be sold for $3,50 the latest edition might be offered for considerably less than $15. Dictionaries of the unabridged kind are really useful features of every household which pretends to read. Not to mention the magazines, which are now very generally taken, and of which articles on scientific subjects are conspicuous features, the Sunday newspaper which finds its way into a large proportion of households, has a medley of topics involving matters in which "dictionary words" are not among the least. He, in fact, is a well posted person who can read current literature without the occasional assistance of an unabridged dictionary. Such a dictionary, however, should be of the latest. Since 1845 a multitude of new words have been coined. We have no desire to disparage the edition offered by the Leader or any other newspaper. We allude to the matter not so much because we think the 1845 edition inadequate for modern use, but because we regard the price between that edition and that of later date as glaringly disproportionate.

LIQUOR LICENSES IN ENGLAND.

The history of the English licensing system, as given by the Christian Union, says the Globe, is interesting in view of the violent opposition aroused by the proposal of the Salisbury Government to "endow public houses." It appears that England was not notorious for drunkenness. The national drink was home brewed beer or ale drunk quite new and at meal time soley. At this time the sale of beer and ale was as free as the sale of food and clothing. What gave rise to the necessity of restriction by license was the habit of tippling between meals. The Globe continues:

What gave rise to the necessity of restriction by license was the introduction of the habit of "tippling" between meals. After the year 1552 no one could sell liquors without a license, and the licensee was subjected to restriction. Before the close of that century we find English magistrates frequently repressing the ale-houses. In 1575, for example, the Lord Mayor of London and the local authorities put down 200 ale-houses at a morning sitting, and after dinner suppressed another hundred. Such suppression was never accompanied by compensation. With the growth of the practice of tippling we may presume that the ale became older and stronger, and finally the stimulated palate demanded something stronger than ale, and the day of distilled liquors began. In 1729 Parliament began to legislate against them, but without much effect. A writer of the time says: "The drunkenness of the common people was so universal by the retailing of a spirit called gin, for which they could get dead drunk for a groat (eight cents), that the whole town of London, and many towns in the country, swarmed with drunken people of both sexes from morning to night, and were more like a scene of bacchanal than the residence of a civil society." In 1729 Parliament returned to the attack and passed Jekyll's act against spirituous liquors, which imposed upon the traffic a tax so high as to be almost prohibitory. It failed signally, popular sentiment being so strong against it that informers were "maltreated by the populace, rolled in the mud, and some were even thrown into the Thames." In 1743 Parliament entered upon the policy of restriction the manufacture and sale of liquor by taxation. It is an interesting fact that the measure was opposed by Lord Chesterfield upon the grounds now taken by some very strong prohibitionists, namely, that it would make the country a partner in the traffic. He called the fund raised by the tax "the drinking fund" and the administration which introduced it "the drinking Ministry." The British Government now receives about $90,000,000 a year from excise on liquors and $9,000,000 from license fees.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In Quebec as in British Columbia, roads, bridges and court houses are constructed and maintained by the Province.

"Genius unexerted is no more genius, says EMERSON, than a bushel of acorns is a forest of oaks. There may be epics in men's brains, just as there are oaks in acorns; but the tree and book must come out before we can measure them. How many men would go to bed dunces and wake up Solomons! You reap what you have sown. Those who sow dunce seed, vice seed, laziness seed, usually get a crop. A man of mere 'capacity undeveloped' is only an organised day dream with a skin on it."

One of the largest industrial enterprises in the world probably is foreshadowed in the announcement that Westinghouse, the air brake and electric motor manufacturer, has pooled his interests with Pullman for the turning out of electric cars and motors. It is said that extensive works will be established near Pittsburg. How extensive they will be those may judge who have noted the rapid increase in the use of electricity for short passenger lines.

An Imperial printed parliamentary return just issued on the subject of colonial representative assemblies contains an ably prepared epitome of the Canadian constitution from Hon. J. A. Chapleau, Dominion Secretary of State. The subject is considered under five heads: 1. System of government; 2, executive power; 3, legislative power; 4, local or provincial legislatures and municipal systems; 5, judiciary. Each feature being fully, though concisely developed on the lines of May, Lord Famborough, Todd, Bourinot, Doutre and other well known constitutional authorities.

The Hamilton Times in the discussion of the Liberal leadership objects to Mr. BLAKE again taking it unless he recants his "Malvern heresy." In a speech at Malvern just before the last general elections Mr. BLAKE said that so greatly had the Canadian public debt increased the amount of revenue required annually that any material reduction of the tariff was out of the question. The Times has a much more aggressive policy; it wants to see all semblance of a tariff wiped away, and the revenue for government purposes raised by a direct tax. This is the policy it urges the Liberal party to adopt for the next election.

Dundas Banner: It is folly to say that the volunteer system of the country has not produced one man competent to take General MIDDLETON's place. Nor is it a strong argument to hold that an old warrior is alone competent for the position. Canada is not looking for trouble and has no expectation of war. The names of two or three capable men could be mentioned offhand. One is Lieut.-Colonel Otter of the Infantry School. Another is Lieut. Col. George T. Denison of the Body Guard. Either of these men would fill the vacant place quite as satisfactorily as it has been filled by General MIDDLETON or any of his predecessors. In any event Canada is entitled to appoint the officials for whom she has to provide the salaries, and this is one of them.

In France, in view of the large number of consumptive patients using the wagonlits on the railways on their way to the South, it is proposed to to adopt measures for thorough disinfection of the beds, clothes, etc. The velvet cushions and silk hangings are to be done away with, and the seats covered with smooth leather, so that they can be easily washed. Carpets are to be replaced by rugs, to be shaken in the open air after each journey. The bedclothes are to be subjected to the action of heat in vapor stoves, and the mattresses are to be covered with impermeable silk of gutta percha tissue so they can be readily cleaned. The invalids will travel in separate compartments, and each will be provided with a spittoon, the contents of which will be destroyed.

It seems to us that the anxiety the Americans have displayed over the alleged concentration of warships at Esquimalt, together with the emphatic denials of the British Columbia press that such has been the case, is a bad as well as a good sign. It is a sign that neither party regard a war over seal justifiable, and yet it shows that both are fully alive to the fact that friction between the United States and England is an extremely ticklish piece of business, that after all no very great amount of friction is necessary to produce an explosion. This feeling is not owing so much to anything that has occurred in the past as to the spirit of rivalry. Just as SULLIVAN and JACKSON stand to each other in point of physical rivalry, so do England and the United States. It is the result of the combative instinct, of the inherent propensity in a man or set of men to want to get on top. Of the friendliness of Canada and England for the United States there is no question, and that the United States as a mass is not well disposed toward Canada and England is equally indisputable, and yet for all, to argue that the two nations would not fight over what moralists would call very inadequate cause, is just simply absurd. Otherwise why should these paltry questions of codfish and seal engage the attention of the most prominent politicians the two countries possess? England and the United States for several years past have been holding palaver over two questions which any two fishwives would be able to dispose of at a single sitting. Why is this? It is the curse, if you please, of pugnacity and rivalry. Those who imagine that the day of arbitration is at hand in the matter of settlement of international disputes are away off. The spectacle of over 100,000,000 people holding their breath while a dispute is being adjudicated involving less than half a million dollars a year should convince any body that questions of expediency instead of morality are those which will finally induce Messrs. PAUNCEFOTE and BLAINE to reach a basis of permanent settlement.

CAN PARROTS REASON?

The Following Story is Told of a Parrot Apropos of Animals' Reasoning Power.

A parrot which had learned the art of swearing, chanced to become the property of a family in which orthodox notions prevailed. To conquer the parrots unfortunate propensity for "cuss words," every time he got off an oath he was immediately soused in a bucket of water, and thereafter placed in front of the fire to dry. Now, the master of the parrot owned a hen and that hen was the mother of a likely brood of chickens. It chanced to rain heavily one day and the chickens were thoroughly wet through. That no ill effects should follow, the chickens were brought into the house and deposited before the fire in the place usually occupied by Poll, after one of his drenchings. Poll was present, and he noted the soaked chickens with an air of no little curiosity. Finally, unable to restrain himself longer, he took up a position close to the shivering chicks and cocking his head to one side got off the following interrogation: "So you have been d—n fools, have you?"

Rajah Brooke.

A few weeks ago the Englishman, Rajah Brooke, seized one-half of what was left of Brunei. It is the old story of the devil asking an inch and taking an ell. The strangely romantic career of Sir James Brooke is very well known. This energetic young Englishman, fired with the spirit of the old adventurers of the Columbian era, the possessor of a fortune of one hundred and fifty dollars, conceived the idea while serving in the British army in Burmah, that if the powers could not suppress piracy in the Malayan waters, he could do it himself. So he threw up his commission, put his fortune in his pocket, bought a small vessel, and quietly set out for Borneo in 1839. The next the world heard was that a smart young man named Brooke, with a pocketful of money, had helped the Sultan of Brunei to put down a rebellion and had been rewarded with the title of Rajah of Sarawak. Then the Sultan of Brunei died, and Rajah Brooke declared Sarawak and such other parts of Brunei as he chose to appropriate to be his own independent domain. The rajah was a terror to evil-doers. He had his ups and downs, but, at last, pirates far and near trembled at his name. Head-hunting in his dominions became a crime, punishable with death. With wonderful energy, he set about developing the commercial possibilities of the country. The village of a thousand people, when the young adventurer had landed in Borneo, became a city of twenty-five thousand inhabitants. Trade grew with rapid strides, the territory of the rajah was recognized by Great Britain as an independent state, its ruler was knighted by Queen Victoria, and, at length, after one of the most romantic careers that ever an adventurer led, Sir James Brooke, Rajah of Sarawak, full of honors and immensely wealthy, was gathered to his fathers. The present rajah was the nephew of Sir James, and last year a revenue of four hundred thousand dollars flowed into his coffers.

The Melancholy of Old Age.

Oliver Wendell Holmes is now an old man. At twenty he penned the following lines:

> The mossy marble rest
> On the lips that he has prest
> In their bloom,
> And the names he loved to hear
> Have been carved for many a year
> On the tomb.

"The world," says he, referring to the foregoing, "was a garden to me then; it is a churchyard now." Then replying to the question:

"I thought you were one of those who looked upon old age cheerfully, and welcomed it as a season of peace and contented enjoyment," he answers:

"I am one of those who so regard it. Those are not bitter or scalding tears that fall from my eyes upon the 'mossy marbles.' The young who left my side early in my life's journey are still with me in the unchanged freshness and beauty of youth. Those who have long kept company with me live on after their seeming departure, were it only by the mere force of habit; their images are all around me, as if every service had been a sensitive film that photographed them; their voices echo about me, as if they had been recorded on those unforgetting cylinders which bring back to us the tones and accents that have imprinted them, as the extinct animals left their tracks on the hardened sands. The melancholy of old age has a divine tenderness in it, which only the sad experience of life can lend a human soul. But there is a lower level—that of tranquil contentment and easy acquiescence in the conditions in which we find ourselves; a lower level, in which old age travels when not using its wings. I say its wings, for no period of life is so imaginative as that which looks to younger people the most prosaic. The atmosphere of memory is one in which imagination flies more easily and feels more at home than in the thinner ether of youthful anticipation." It is nevertheless apparent, withal, that the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" would prefer to linger in this vale of tears another three-quarters of a century.

Sixteen Ugly Sores.

THEY WERE TOO SOFT.

Soldiers Jumped Their Hotel Because They Couldn't Sleep on Feathers.

In April, 1864, a New York regiment was in Covington, Ky. Cincinnati lies just across the river, and the temptation to visit it was too strong for men who had been for years enduring the privations of army life. A little party of them determined to go over and attend a place of amusement. What took place after the performance is thus described by one of the participants:

We thought it would be a rare treat to put up at a hotel for the night, enjoy a sound sleep on a soft bed, and have a good breakfast before returning to camp in the morning.

To this end we repaired to the hotel, paid a dollar and a half each for our double bedded room—there were four in the party—and then went to the theatre.

We enjoyed the performance, and, after partaking of a good oyster supper, returned to the hotel and retired, anticipating a good night's sleep on the feather beds.

After criticising what we had seen, and eating over again in imagination the excellent supper we had enjoyed, and contrasting our nice, comfortable beds with the places we had been obliged to sleep in during our late campaign, we turned over and tried to sleep.

All was quiet for perhaps half an hour. Then I noticed my bedfellow becoming very restless, apparently trying to get into a comfortable position.

"Come, John!" I exclaimed, "why don't you lie still and go to sleep?"

"Why don't you go to sleep yourself?" was the response.

Then we heard similar questions and exclamations from the other bed; and soon our companions were heard tumbling out and lying down on the floor, declaring that they "couldn't sleep on that bed; it's too soft."

We chaffed each other a good deal about our adventure, but decided rather than pay for beds in the hotel and then of our own accord lie on the floor, we had better go back to the barracks and lie in our bunks.

"Yes," said one, "but we have paid for our breakfast, too; we don't want to lose that."

"Never mind," rejoined another, "let's go back."

So we got up, dressed and sneaked downstairs, as though we had been trying to "jump" our board bill.

The night clerk sat dozing in his chair. We felt too sheepish to acknowledge the truth to him, and simply inquiring at what hour breakfast would be ready, we started for the ferry and managed to catch the last boat to Covington.

In less than five minutes after stretching ourselves in our bunks, we were sound asleep. We did not think it worth while to go back to the hotel for our breakfast.

Fifteen years afterward I met my bedfellow of that night, at the breakfast table of a hotel, but neither of us complained of having been unable to enjoy the soft beds. Our Cincinnati adventure was recalled, and we smiled together over the days of long ago.—Exchange.

ANNUAL PRIZE MEETING

Of the B.C. Rifle Association, to be Held at Goldstream Next Month.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the B. C. Rifle Association will commence at Goldstream on August 6th, when the best list of prizes ever published will be competed for. Firing will commence at 10 a.m. on the first day and 9 a.m. on the following days. In all there will be nineteen matches, among which are the Nanaimo, Westminster and Victoria corporation matches; and the one for the Laurie bugle, the Lieut.-Governor and Chapleau cups, and the Menzies stakes, besides money prizes added to each. The meeting will be under the patronage of his honor the Lieut.-Governor, and with the increased interest that has been taken in the association lately the meeting ought to be a grand success, and no doubt it will.

AMONG THE TOILERS.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Lemmens to Preach on the Eight Hour Movement Tomorrow.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Victoria Trades Assembly held last evening a letter was read from Right Rev. Bishop Lemmens in which he acknowledged the receipt of the circular sent to the clergy of the city by the Assembly, and stating that he would, with pleasure, preach on the subject of the eight hour movement at the R. C. Cathedral at 10:30 to-morrow morning. This is the first ball fired in Victoria and no doubt a large number of workingmen will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear the subject well sifted by his reverence. The Chinese question was also discussed by the meeting, each member taking part with an enthusiasm that has not been known in the history of the Assembly. One member stated that the harrowing spectacle presented by the presence of Chinamen was a detriment to respectable immigration. After the matter had been fully discussed it was decided to appoint a committee to investigate the evils arising from Chinatown and when their labors are concluded to publish the facts in pamphlet form. A committee was also appointed to revise the constitution of the Assembly. By the enthusiasm shown by the members last evening it is evident that the Victoria Trades Assembly will soon have a firm footing in Victoria and their future success is undoubted.

During the past week preliminaries were arranged for the formation of three new unions in the city and next week will see them fully organized.

A FLAT DENIAL.

The Late Articles in the Port Townsend Leader Criticised.

Last week a general falsifier was sent over to this city to get up something for the columns of the Leader pertaining to the sealing question and the probable movements of the war fleet at Esquimalt. The writer, who shows by his facile use of the pencil that he is no novice, got up about two columns of guff, most of which was entirely foreign to the subject matter in hand and part of which was so palpably imaginative that trouble has not been even taken to deny it seriatim. A general discredit was placed on the whole article through, and now the Leader editorially gets on its ear, and claims that because it scooped the Victorian papers the latter are envious. The Leader takes credit for getting a so-called official statement from Captain St. Clair of H.M.S. Champion, who, the festive falsifier says, took up an hour and forty minutes in reading to the Leader's representative all the official correspondence and private telegrams he had received from the Home Office, and also allowed the newsman to take copies of the same.

Now with all respect to the credulity of the American reading public, there are surely some intelligent men who know better than to believe any such yarn as that of the Leader man, but for the sake of those who don't know, it is explained right here that the tale is one which would take first rank as a prize twister. The idea that a captain in Her Majesty's navy would so artlessly give away state secrets is too utterly absurd to be even entertained for a moment, and upon good authority The Times states that no such information was furnished the Leader man as he pretends was. Why, any English naval officer who would be guilty of such a breach of duty would probably be cashiered instantly. Polite and affable the British naval officers always is, but when it comes to giving away the orders from the powers that be, and especially to a newsmonger, then the communicativeness ceases at once.

The Leader need not feel anyways exhilarated over its alleged scoop. When the Victoria press desires it can publish equally sensational articles, but fortunately no occasion for such exists, and facts are what is dealt with here. The readers of the Times are kept fully advised of all the important questions of the day, as are the readers of the other metropolitan papers, and the efforts of a country journal to get up a sensation falls flat. Not to be too severe on the young man who did the write up, it is only just to say that a part of his screed was fairly correct, but the major portion of it shows that the writer must have been afflicted with an abnormally developed cranium, and one, too, which would do credit to a novelist. A prominent naval officer, when spoken to by a Times reporter concerning the truth of the article in the Leader, replied that it was all "buncombe," and that is about the most concise way of treating the matter.

FROM ALASKA.

Karluk Canneries Have Big Catch—Movements of the U.S. Ships.

San Francisco, July 17.—By the arrival of the Percy Edwards from Kayak island late news is at hand from Alaska.

The Percy Edwards brought down 1,200 cases of salmon from Kayak. The canneries at Karluk are reported as having a big catch, and 2,000 cases of salmon have already been shipped from there.

The schooner Sitka is reported to be at Sitka with a catch of fifty fur sealskins.

On June 16 the U.S. fish commissioners' steamer Albatross was at Ounalaska. Captain Turner stated that a running survey had been made of several groups of islands from Protection point to Fort Alexander. At the same time there were in port at Ounalaska the Arago, the Bear, the Dora and the St. Paul. The Bear subsequently proceeded on her cruise in Behring sea. The Albatross has sailed for British bay, where several surveys will be made.

The sealer Undaunted put in at Kayak for supplies not long ago, with the news that no seals had been taken. Several other sealers, whose names are not known, had the same report to make.

The Central Alaska Commercial Company is removing its cannery from Kayak to Tin point.

By a private dispatch to this city to-day, the first news of the season regarding the catch of the Pacific coast contingent of the New Bedford whalers is received. The dispatch is from Captain Shockley, of the bark Tamerlane, which left here in March last. He reports that his cruise has extended along the coast of Kodiak. The season thus far has been a profitable one. At the date of the dispatch the Tamerlane had captured three whales, making a yield of 225 barrels of oil and 3,000 pounds of whalebone. The Tamerlane will take on a supply of provisions and proceed on a new whaling cruise.

MAGNIFICENT STEAMSHIPS.

Full Description of the New C. P. R. Ocean Racers—Very Strong.

The three new steamers for the C. P. R. which are soon to be placed on the Orient route, are rapidly approaching completion. The Marine Engineer, an English journal, devoted to building pertaining to steamship matters, says that the contracts signed requires that the vessels develope 19 knots on the trial, and 16½ knots on a 400 miles sea trip. It is confidently expected by the builders that this will be exceeded.

In the design of these vessels the greatest possible attention has been paid to strength, subdivision, and general means of safety, no expense being spared by the C. P. R. Co., or by the building firm, to make the vessels in every respect equal to the very finest vessels afloat. Their engines will indicate about 10,000 horse power, and they are to be propelled by twin-screws, the engine room being divided by a fore-and-aft bulkhead, and the propeller, or tail-end shaft, being carried within the structure of the hull to the very extremity, thus doing away with the external support known as the "A" bracket principle. The hull is subdivided by eleven transverse watertight bulkheads, all reaching to the upper-deck. Of these, three forward and three aft are without doors of any kind, while the remaining five have specially constructed watertight doors, with patent releasing apparatus. The four boilers supplying the engines with steam are placed in two compartments divided by a cross bunker, and are fully protected by wing bulkheads and side bunkers. Arrangement is also made for the protection of the engines by coal in the event of the vessels being taken up as armed cruisers.

The dimensions of the vessels are:—Length, between perpendiculars, 485 feet; breadth, moulded, 51 feet; depth, moulded, 36 feet; tonnage, 5700 tons gross. They are lightly rigged with pole masts, and fore-and-aft canvas, and their form, both under and above water, is of such symmetry and fineness as to afford great assurance of propulsion at the high speed required. The steering engines, which are of first class make, are connected with a drum working on the rudder head, which is again controlled by a patent hydraulic brake.

The arrangements and fittings for passengers are of the most complete and luxurious kind. On the prominade deck aft is a large smoking room, and forward the library and special state rooms, all panelled in hardwood. Above the prominade deck is a light permanent awning deck, on which are carried ten lifeboats and two collapsible boats are fitted with patent lowering and disengaging gear. At the forward end of this deck are the captain's quarters, chart room and wheelhouse. On the upper deck is a large dining saloon with gallies and pantries attached, and on one side are some dozen special state rooms, while on the other are the quarters of the officers and engineers. Further aft is the steerage smoking room and various other quarters. The remainder of the first and second-class passenger accommodation is upon the main deck, on which also provision is made for 500 steerage passengers. The vessels are lighted throughout by electricity, and are thoroughly ventilated from a series of electric fans, each three feet in diameter and delivering about 400,000 cubic feet of air per hour. The vessels will carry in addition to their large complement of passengers, about 4,000 tons of tea, and are specially designed with side ports and side hatches arranged with a view to the speedy reception and delivery of cargo.

It is expected that the first vessel will be launched early in August, and be ready to leave for her station on the Pacific about the end of October next. She will be followed at intervals of about two months by her sister ships. It is intended by the Canadian Pacific Co. to arrange a "round the world" excursion when these vessels are completed—"out" by the Suez Canal, via China or Australia, across the Pacific and the railway, and "home" either via Quebec or New York.

First Sod.

Mayor Lafferty, of Calgary, has proclaimed Monday afternoon, July 21, a public holiday, to celebrate the turning of the first sod of the Calgary & Edmonton Railway by Hon. E. Dewdney.

The City of Seattle.

A dispatch from Philadelphia states that the new steamer City of Seattle has been fired up and that the test of the boilers was in every way successful. Mr. Frank A. Woodman, of Seattle, who is to be the first officer under the Captain of the new steamer, has just started for Philadelphia, and will remain there until she sails, which will be about the middle of August.

Tariff Regulations.

Elastic, rubber thread, calcareous tufa for the manufacture of fibre ware, rolled iron tubes, angle iron, lacquered iron tubing for the manufacture of bedsteads, hemp paper, primers and felt board for the manufacture of gun wads and cartridges, have been placed on the free list until such time as they are manufactured in Canada. The regulations for the free importation of the second process in the manufacture of blacking has been amended. Moulded celluloid balls are rated for duty at ten per cent.

Labor Saving Devices.

A dozen very large new iron wheelbarrows, outside of Spratt & Gray's workshops, caused a TIMES reporter to-day to think that a race of giants would need to be imported to manipulate the said barrows, that is, if they were to be used in carrying heavy substances. This idea was strengthened when, in response to a question, a [illegible] used in coaling the C. P. N. boats. Mr. Gray, of the firm, subsequently explained, however, that the barrows were constructed on a design whereby the weight was all thrown on the wheels of which there are two, and thus the labor of wheeling them is so much relieved that three times the quantity of coal can be handled. The plan saves labor and gets the disagreeable job of coaling done quicker.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

F. A. Clayton Sent up to the Higher Court to be Tried.

After Jas. Davis, an Indian brave, had contributed $5 to the city funds for being drunk, the case of F. A. Clayton, the bogus subscription agent, came up. The prisoner wanted to change his plea to that of "guilty," but his honor said that after looking up the law he found that he had no jurisdiction and an examination would accordingly be held and the prisoner could not plead. After the evidence of yesterday had been reheard, the prisoner was committed for trial.

Newspaper Sale.

It has been reported by the Tacoma Globe that the Seattle Journal, the Democratic organ, was sold the other day to St. Paul men for a price somewhere between $20,000 and $40,000.

Gold Mine Discovered.

Captain Ross, of Port Townsend, who went north on a prospecting tour a few weeks ago, has returned, and says that he has located a valuable gold mine on the west coast of Vancouver Island. A ledge was struck twenty feet wide, and 300 pounds of ore was taken out. Captain Ross intends to resume operations in his mine shortly, and will charter a schooner at Townsend to take him to the mine.

Shark Skins Wanted.

A new industry is likely to start in this part of the world ere long. Mr. Gustav Rheinlaender, of San Francisco, an agent of a Vienna leather merchant, is in this section trying to find out if a certain species of shark with a peculiar mottled skin can be found in these waters. The skins are very valuable for fancy leathers, and will fetch high prices. The kinds requested are the centrophorus granulosus, or the scymnus lichia.

Better Service.

Mr. Wilson, of Vancouver, B.C., paid Port Crescent a visit last Monday, says the Star. Mr. Wilson came here as an agent for the Canadian Pacific Railway to look over the ground with the view of establishing a sub-marine cable between Port Becher and this place, thus giving Vancouver Island direct telegraphic communications with the United States. He returned on Tuesday and expressed himself as being highly and favorably pleased as to the feasibility of the plan.

Goes to Work.

The steamer Amelia, which has so long been laid up, is to go on duty again, she having been chartered by Captain Rogers, owner of the steamer Dunsmuir, to take the latter's place on the Nanaimo-Vancouver route for a time while that vessel receives some much needed repairs. The Amelia was to-day hauled alongside Spratt's wharf and work commenced on her preparatory to her leaving for the scene of her labors. She will probably be about a fortnight on the route, and meantime will have to compete against the new steamer Cutch.

New Residences.

Fairfield road and adjoining streets have during the last season been one of the principal parts of the city to which builders of residences have been turning their attention. Perhaps one of the prettiest residences in Victoria has been built in that part of the city by A. A. Green, of Garesche, Green & Co., bankers. The residence is prettily situated and commands a good view of the Straits. A little further down the road three more fine residences are being built for different gentlemen, and with others which are being built in different parts of the city will make splendid additions to Victoria's already fine lot of residences.

Runaway.

Last evening, a milkman who lives on the Richmond road, left his horse standing on Yates street, in charge of his four-year-old son. The horse, which is a young one, took fright at something and made a break for home via Yates and Fort street. The little boy hung on to the reins for dear life and succeeded in holding his seat until the horse reached home. The runaway caused considerable excitement as it looked very doubtful if the child could escape being thrown from the buggy, but nevertheless he did, and, thanks to his innocence, did not attempt to jump out, a course which undoubtedly would have ended seriously.

For the New Railroad.

It is learned that two locomotives and thirty cars are now in route over the C. P. R. for the Fairhaven and Southern Railway, says the Columbian. They come from Schenectady, N. Y., and are due to reach Westminster within ten days. One of the locomotives and a number of the cars will be used on the British Columbia division of the railway, and the other locomotive and the remainder of the cars will go to Fairhaven for use on the southern division. The company's immense scow will come up from Fairhaven to carry away the locomotive, and will bring up a quantity of steel rails for track laying in the Liverpool yards. The arrival of the vessel with steel rails from England is anxiously looked for.

For the Public Schools.

The long recommended change of heating the Central Public School buildings by steam is to be made at last, and Messrs. Spratt & Gray have now in hand a boiler which is to furnish the caloric for the purpose. It is of twenty horse power, and will supply ample steam for the building. The construction is as strong as that of a boiler to carry 75 pounds of steam, while this one will never need to be subjected to a pressure of over ten pounds. The pipes and raidiators will be put in by Messrs. Braden & Stamford, and the job is to be all complete by August. The danger of the stove has now been removed, and much comfort to the teachers and scholars will result from the change.

The historical old mint of New Westminster has been torn down, and the machinery so long unused carted away. The Columbian suggests that the city council set it up in the basement of the city hall and start coining, thus becoming independent of outside loans.

THE WELLINGTON EVICTIONS.

His Honor Judge Harrison Says the Law will be Enforced.

After a number of cases had been decided in the court yesterday, the single men being allowed from one to three days to vacate, and the married ones 10 days, his honor said in the course of other remarks that the men were divided into three classes. One class would lie on the company as long as they could, the other class would lie on the Union as long as they had funds to keep them, while the third would strike out into other work and be independent, and he trusted the latter class would largely predominate.

Mr. Campbell, for the defendants, said that seeing that three days was the amount of time allowed for single men and ten for married men, consented to judgment in all cases on this basis, inclusive of the case of Thos. Campbell in which case a non-suit was obtained.

The question of those who had gardens and claims to the houses they lived in, the plaintiff voluntarily agreed to let them take their stuff, and in cases of houses, not being attached to the company's houses, the builders to have the right to remove them.

Before closing the Court Judge Harrison stated that the judgment of the Court in every instance would have to be implicitly obeyed, (the only exception being in cases of illness). The plaintiff had a right to the possession of her property, and he trusted the possession would be given within the times respectively adjudged—the time to count from Friday. He said that the orders had been given, and if not obeyed, warrants would issue to the sheriff to give the plaintiff possession, and no matter at what cost those warrants would have to be obeyed. He also drew attention to the terrible results that would follow any obstruction of the sheriff in the proper execution of his duty. To obstruct a sheriff was a criminal offence, subject to most severe penalties. He felt in his own mind that the people of Wellington were of an independent and law abiding spirit, and that in this matter no trouble or overt act was even anticipated. If the men could not agree with their employers, there was plenty of work for them in this province of many undeveloped industries, and from what he had seen of them he felt they had within them the true principles of manhood, and would not stoop to retain possession of which (at the expiration of the three and ten days respectively) they had no legal right, but would peacefully give up possession to the owner. His honor had his remarks interpreted to the Belgians so that they would know as well as the English speaking defendants what the result of disobeying the law would bring about.

CHANGE IN THE CLERGY.

Reverend Father Van Nevel Takes Charge of the Quamichan Mission.

Much to the regret of many of the Catholics of this city, Father Van Nevel has been transferred to Cowichan, where he has taken charge of the Indian mission at Quamichan. This change has been doubtless made by the superiors for the good of the church, but many of St. Andrew's congregation here think that some other priest could have been better spared.

Since his residence in Victoria Father Van Nevel has made many friends, not only among those whose religious belief coincides with his, but also among others. Genial and uniformly urbane, he has been respected by all, and while as a priest of the church he watched over the welfare of his flock most carefully.

The young people, especially will miss him, and more particularly those members of the Young Men's Institute, as Father Van Nevel was only recently unanimously elected president of the branch here. The many members hope that Bishop Lemmens will see fit to rescind his order, and will nominate some other to take control of the mission, and allow Father Van Nevel to return, although there is no doubt but what Father Van Nevel's management of the spiritual and temporal affairs there will be unequalled.

A letter has been received in this city from him at Quamichan in which he states that he already feels in better health, the rich country air being both bracing and invigorating. His many friends [illegible] failing health will be more greatly benefited, and at an early date he may return.

Lost His Fingers.

A helper at the Albion Iron Works known among the employees as "Admiral," he having for a long while worked around the steamers, had his little finger severed from his hand and his other fingers badly cut by a circular saw yesterday. He took a piece of board to the pattern shop to cut it, but instead of putting the board under the buzzing saw, he put his hand under it with the above result. He will very likely have to have his four fingers amputated.

An Unfriendly Act.

The Knights of Pythias look upon the conduct of their Victoria brethren as very unfriendly in not sending a committee or representative to act for them in the demonstration of yesterday, but it is a singular fact this has not only occurred with this Order, but also with the Order of Odd Fellows and other orders. It seems as though the Victorians are averse to visit this city and it is to be regretted as it somewhat tends to strain the harmony and good feeling that should exist between this city and the Capital. The various lodges of the different Orders in Nanaimo have repeatedly responded to the call of the Victorians and have given up work at a great inconvenience to oblige them in a brotherly way by attending to various matters pertaining to the Orders.—Nanaimo Free Press. An explanation is now in order.

Gone Aloft.

Capt. D. W. Aden, one of the pioneer steamboat men of the Province, died at his residence Simcoe street, on Thursday evening, after a short illness. He was 62 years of age, and a native of Germany. The deceased was closely connected with the early steamboats of the Province, and commanded the ill-fated Grappler from the time she ran on the Stikeen river until she was burned to the water's edge about six years ago. After the loss of the Grappler the captain took charge of Capt. Wm. Moore's steamer the Western Slope, with which steamer he used to show a pair of clean heels to any thing that ran on the Fraser. Capt. Aden was always a good seaman, and showed a great deal of coolness while the steamer Grappler was being burnt from under him, which fact evidently had a great deal to do with the manner in which all on board escaped. He leaves a wife and small family to mourn the loss of kind father and loving husband. The funeral will take place on Sunday the 20th inst. from his late residence, 241 Simcoe street.

Again Falls Us.

For about the thousandth time the telegraph wires, or the purveyor of the news which the press is supposed to receive daily over the wires, failed in the performance of their duty, and our telegraphic budget is consequently considerably curtailed. Like ourselves, the readers of the TIMES will have to grin and bear it. The under dog in a fight cannot dictate the terms of capitulation.

Teachers Off Duty.

A party of 50 teachers, who have been attending the Provincial Institute, rowed up to the Gorge yesterday afternood, bent on driving dull care away for a time. What with boating, dancing, refreshments, etc., they passed a most enjoyable time and returned in the evening thoroughly pleased with the day's enjoyment.

They See Stars.

The admission of Idaho is said to have been a serious disaster to the Connecticut flag manufacturers, says an American exchange. When the states of Montana, Washington and the two Dakotas were admitted the manufacturers flooded the country with circulars imploring all good patriots to call in their 38-starred flags as obsolete and purchase new ones with a glorious galaxy of 42. Idaho's admission raises the number of asterisks to 43, and as the Connecticut manufacturers have a mammoth stock of the 42 brand on hand they are seeing stars in a most unpleasant manner.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Preliminaries of the great sweepstakes race to take place at Monmouth park were arranged to-night, and the public may count on seeing Salvator, Tenny and Kingston race to decide the title of king of the turf. The matter of distance has not yet been settled. It is believed that each owner will stake $5000, and the association add $15,000.

"If this thing keeps on," said a New York map printer the other day, "we'll all have to go into bankruptcy. We hadn't got our United States map fixed up with North and South Dakota before the Brazil revolution knocked South America endwise, and now Wyoming and Idaho are turned into States. Africa has to be fixed over every six months, and the latest and most serious change of all is in this German-English arrangement to knock out Heligoland from the British empire. That isn't a big change, but it is plenty big enough to spoil all our maps of Europe. It would almost pay the map-makers of the world to chip in and buy the nasty little island in order to make a present of it to England, and save the expense of getting up new maps of Europe."
